ROGUES IN NEW

Professionial Beggars and Beats Hit on a Neat Scheme to Raise the Wind.

Securing the Clothing of Newly Departed People on the Plea of Being Friends.

Bank Wrecker Harper Treated Like a Lord in the Columbus Penitentiary by Officers and Convicts, Illustrious members of the noble army of professional beggars and beats have evolved a new and novel enterprise by which to secure contributions to their support, and this is by searching the columns of death notices and calling upon the friends of deceased members of society to solicit the clothing left by the dead, says a New York dispatch. One day after the recent funeral of a gentleman in Brooklyn, a neatly dressed man with a weed on his hat called upon the widow, representing himself as a friend of her dead husband. After a few words of well expressed condolence and sympathy he related his own sorrow at the recent death of his wife and his subsequent financial disasters, which left him in embarrasing circumstances, and concluded by asking her circumstances, and concluded by asking her delicately for some of her husband's clothing. The lady, full of sympathy, answered that it was packed away owing to the long illness of her husband, and that she did not feel equal to the task of disturbing it, whereupon he suggested that she give him his overcoat or anything of the kind that she could get easily, and was only disposed of by being told that the gentleman's effects were in the hands of his executors and subject to their disposal alone. Three or or four days afterwards another representative of the same class called with a similar tale of woe and the interim was made delightful for the bereaved woman by an avalanche of advertisements for monument, floral tributes, mourning cards and stationery.

Bank Wrecker Harper in Luck. About a year ago, when the Herald correspondent was detailed to investigate the rumor that E. L. Harper, the imprisoned ex-president of the Fidelity bank, was shown unusual favors by the prison officials he was assured by all the prison officials that there was no truth in it, a Columbus, Ohio dispatch to the Chicago Herald, When the correspondent was introduced to Mr. Harper, the noted prisoner straightened his commanding figure and said: "Give the Herald my compliments, and say that I neither ask nor receive any special favors." Whether that was true at the time or not, it is very certain that Harper's lot is not a very bad one now. The lenient treatment accorded the noted convict has even become so marked that the prison officers have begun to talk of it. Said one of these officers to-day: "Harper is accorded outrageous privileges. It makes my blood boil to see how he is lording it here. Why, he never rises until after 80'clock in the morning. Often as late as 10. He has the privilege of the whole prison yard at all times as far as I can see. Indeed, I doubt very much if he is even locked in his cell at night. He does not take his meals with the common prisoners in the great dining hall, but has dainty dinners served in the chapel and cooked to suit his dainty appetite. It is positively forbidden by the prison rules that any prisoner shall wear other than prison clothes, yet Harper wears fine clothes all the time, a laundried shirt, collar and scarf. Prisoners who have money to buy a hat are allowed to wear one instead of the striped prison cap, but all such must bear the letters "O. P." in big white letters.

Harber Botoners deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them, with the ministrators of the estate of Catherine Kenck, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them, with the ministrators of the estate of Catherine Kenck, deceased, to exhibit them, with the easied state, in said County of Lewis and Clarke.

Dated at Helena, Montana the business of said estate, in said County of Lewis and Clarke.

Thomas S. Marshall, deceased. Notice is months after the first publication of the business of said estate, in the months after the first publication of the estate of Catherine Kenck.

Condet the redictors of and all persons having claims against the said estate, Harper, the noted prisoner straightened his prison clothes, yet Harper wears fine clothes all the time, a laundried shirt, collar and scarf. Prisoners who have money to buy a hat are allowed to wear one instead of the striped prison cap, but all such must bear the letters 'O. P.' in big white letters. Harper has a fine black hat upon which I see no such letters. Prisoners are always addressed by guards and officers by their serial numbers or by their last names, but all the officers address the bank wrecker as 'Mr. Harper.' Other convicts are shaved only once a week, but Harper goes to the barber shop every morning. His mustache has been spared, although it is a prison rule that is waived in no other case that the prisoners' faces be shaved smooth. When in course of his work he is accosted by any of the prisoners other than as 'Mr. Harper' he raves at them as a lord would at an offending servant. Harper is yet kept at work in the secretary's office, his special work being keeping the accounts of prisoners who are employed on the piece price plan, getting a portion of the money their products bring. His cell is far above the average and luxurious. Still, there are others better furnished. In this matter the prisoners have free scope to fix their cells up as they will."

In this matter the prisoners have free scope to fix their cells up as they will."

When asked if he was not afraid to make this matter public, the official said he did not want his name used, but, if necessary, he would be happy to substantiate the facts he had given. Gov. Campbell will find work to do at the prison on entering office.

MISSION WORK IN MONTANA.

Bishop Brewer Tells What Has Been Done

and What Should Be Done. Rt. Rev. Leigh Richmond Brewer, who has been stopping at St. Peter's rectory during his visit to the city, is a noble looking gentleman, with a kind and thoughtful face and a very intelligent pair of eyes. He is bishop of the progressive state of Montana and has been identified with its church interests since its sojourn there. He is carnest and commanding in his speech and quickly wins an audience by the power of an attractive presence. At St. Peter's church yesterday morning he preached a powerful and interesting discourse to a large audience. When questioned yester-day by a reporter of the Argus con-cerning the far away state, he re-plied: When I went to Montana, about plied: When I went to Montana, about nine years ago, there were about 40,000 people, no town of more than 4,500 population, and about fifty miles of railway; now the territory is a state, has a population of 200,000, two towns of 25,000 each, and there are nearly 2,000 miles of railways. The three interests of mining, agriculture and stock raising make it a prosperous pountry, and the development in all these lepartments increases year by year. The thurch grows with the growth of material interests, and the increase in population. therests, and the increase in population. ine years ago we had seven clergymen, bur churches, one rectory, 375 communists and a little over $20,000 in church toperty. To-day we have twelve clergymen east. Now is the time to lay foundations, and I could use eight or ten more clergymen than I have to good advantage. The people there are generous in the support of all public enterprises and the churches. But for the most part they are without large means and are deserving of help. I received a generous help from various dioceses, parishes and individuals, and for that I am thankful. The work done in the present and the money expended will insure good results in the future, and if you expect me to do the work that you sent me out there to do, you must give me your help out there to do the work that you sent me out there to do, you must give me your help in its accomplishment."

The offertory at St. Peter's yesterday amounted to $148.78. This was given to the mission work in Montana. The bishop preached at the cathedral at 4 p. m.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, druggist, Bippus, Ind., testi fies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as fies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles and was cured of rheumatism of ten years' standing." Abraham Eare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my twenty years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimods that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or blood. Only half a dollar a bottle at R. S. Hale & Co.'s drug stors.
